Additional Questions

1.	What aspect(s) of my teaching style should be changed? What went well, what did not go well in recitations?
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>I can't think of a way to change your teaching style, however, it was a little hard to decipher what was written on the board and in the notes provided.</li> <li>You got a bit of a stutter but besides that I think you did perfect</li> <li>You suck at teaching. Complete shit. One dimensional teacher</li> <li>I really appreciated how Aravinth posted a modified homework each week for us to follow along with when doing our assignments. I think if you handed it out in class to the people that truly put in the time for recitation and applied themselves, the attendance rate would be higher. Aravinth is a great guy who probably deserves more than what he is paid. He goes the extra mile to make sure if we apply ourselves, we are rewarded. I just wish more people in the recitation would have taken advantage of these opportunities.</li> <li>I liked that you went over the homework in class, but you often skipped over certain parts. I also wish you would have done a bit more of going over the in class learning.</li> </ul>

Additional Comments

1.	Additional Comments
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>I have no additional comments.</li> <li>Perfect Recitation TA, only thing to work on is stop being jittery sometimes</li> <li>You're smart but fucking suck in every other aspect</li> <li>I would recommend Aravinth as a recitation teacher to any future Calculus students I know. Since this class was a retake for me, I was not too ambitious, but Aravinth helped contribute to my success and passing grade the second time around. Past class, he would ask us about our weekend and show interest in our lives, which doesn't go unnoticed. Thanks for a great semester!</li> </ul>
